The Stephen D. Cutler Center for Investments and Finance is committed to furthering Babson’s innovative and practical approach to finance education, creating a collaborative environment for faculty, industry practitioners, and students to learn from one another. The Center offers a world-class finance center with cutting-edge financial technologies, experiential learning programs, and thought leadership events that enrich the student experience and engage our alumni community.

A WORLD CLASS FINANCE CENTER

When the Center was originally built seventeen years ago, it was designed for research only. For that reason, the 800 sq. ft. facility is not well suited as a teaching space. Part of our evolution must include a larger physical space that can be used for teaching graduate, undergraduate, and executive education courses.

We have secured a prominent location for an expanded center in the new Babson Commons that will be built in front of Horn Library. Construction commenced in May 2018 and is expected to be complete in May 2019. The new facility will sit at the heart of campus and provide Babson students with unique opportunities to learn and lead, giving them access to a suite of analytical tools and exclusive experiential learning programs designed to prepare them for successful careers in financial services.

With adequate funding, the new facility will allow Babson to provide the technological resources and space required to profoundly change the graduate and undergraduate finance curricula. It will also allow the Cutler Center to offer executive education courses and certificate programs that integrate the resources of the Center and leverage the applied orientation of our faculty across campus.
