Dr. Natalie Taylor was Professor Emerita in the Entrepreneurship Center at Babson College. She had 12 years of industry experience before earning her Doctorate at the Harvard Business School. She taught at Babson College for 26 years and was the first professor to design and teach courses in Social Entrepreneurship. Her effort to have a program such as this started at Babson resulted in the recognition that Social Entrepreneurship is an important aspect to be included in the Babson Program. This highly regarded MBA program is distinctive for its progressive and integrative curricular approach. She had a passion for teaching and a special way of inspiring her students.
