Developing Tomorrow’s Finance Leaders

As a student, there are four main areas and many ways in which you can get involved with the Stephen D. Cutler Center for Investments and Finance. Here is more information about the Investments Lab, Experiential Learning, the Undergraduate Mentor Program, and Thought Leadership events, where you can:

INVESTMENTS LAB:
- Access a wide array of analytical tools, such as Bloomberg, FactSet, Rotman Interactive Trader, S&P Capital IQ, and ARGUS Commercial Real Estate.
- Take full advantage of the CFA Institute University Affiliation Program with access to the CFA curriculum, practice exams for Levels I, II, and III, and apply for one of 16 annual scholarships.
- Be a staff assistant at the Cutler Center, helping students use the tools, complete assignments, and access training tutorials for Bloomberg and Factset.

UNDERGRADUATE MENTOR PROGRAM:
- Get involved in the Cutler Center mentor program, where finance industry professionals provide advice, guidance, and feedback while helping you expand your professional network.

EXPERIENTIAL LEARNING:
- Manage $3 million of the Babson College endowment through the Babson College Fund, an accredited, two-semester course, while being mentored by 12 executives in residence.
- Participate in the Rotman International Trading Competition, an annual, three-day simulated market challenge that attracts teams of students and their faculty advisors from universities worldwide.
- Compete again classmates from Babson, Olin College, and Wellesley College during the annual Babson Trading using the Rotman Interactive Trader software, which simulates an order-driven market.
- Join a student finance organization, where you can expand your knowledge of the finance world through speaker visits, workshops, and conferences.

THOUGHT LEADERSHIP:
- Attend thought leadership conferences and events, where you will join faculty and alumni to collaborate and learn from one another.
