As Babson community members it is our responsibility to help each and every student flourish and reach their highest potential both academically and socially. At times you may come across a student who is in need of help, guidance or advocacy. This guide is intended to provide you with some basic resources and guidance when working with students in need.
A critical step in supporting students who may be experiencing some distress is making sure the student knows they are not alone. Often, it is the ability to just listen that can have the biggest impact. Here is a list of suggestions on how to respond to a student in need of support:

- Invite the student to meet in a private setting, such as your office
- Express your concerns directly and honestly
- Let the student know you are generally concerned for them
- Remain calm; show the student you care by expressing yourself in a caring and supportive tone and mannerisms
- Validate the student’s efforts in seeking help
- Consider cultural differences that may play a factor for students; students’ expectations of what can be done, external pressures or stigma associated with asking for help
- If you are concerned about a student in psychological distress who may be considering suicide or self-harm, ask the student directly about this, and let them know you are concerned and will be contacting the Wellness Center or Public Safety for their support and help
- If you are unsure of an appropriate referral or how to help a student please feel free to call the Dean of Students office (781-239-5008) during the day or call Public Safety (781-239-5555) after hours and ask to speak to the Dean on Call to seek guidance
When to listen, support and advise:

- Student shares common life struggles (homesickness, relationship break ups)
- Student shares concerns regarding academic performance/faculty grading
- Student conveys frustration or annoyance with project/ team member

When to consult and or refer to resource:

- Student discloses they have been a victim of gender based misconduct: Contact Betsy Rauch, Title IX Coordinator brauch1@babson.edu or 781-239-5501
- Student shows signs of depression, anxiety or substance abuse
- Student who exhibits a significant behavior change or suddenly stops attending class/becomes uncharacteristically unresponsive
- Student expresses passive thoughts of death but not intent to self-harm
- Student shares an email alluding to something disturbing or has troubling content in a written assignment
- Student is facing financial hardship
- Student is struggling with immigration or visa issues

When to take immediate action and call:

- Any mention of intent to harm oneself or others
- Presence of unusual or disturbing thoughts or behaviors
- Medical problems that are life-threatening
- Persistence of problem despite prior efforts to refer student
